CURING AROMATIC TOBACCO SUBJECT OF VPI STUDY

It will pay aromatic tobacco growers to give considerable attention to facilities for wilting and curing the crop, say researchers at the VPI Agricultural Experiment Station.

McNeil Marshall, of the department of Agricultural Engineering says a two-room barn seems most desirable — one room for wilting and one to cure — each large enough to hold one priming. Tests indicate that the wilting room should be arranged and ventilated to maintain a relative humidity of 50% to 60% and a temperature of from 70° to 80° F. Forced air circulation and supplemental heat in the curing room are necessary for highest quality. Relative humidity in the curing room should be 30% to 50% and temperature 90° or higher, but not above 100° F.

Several types of heating systems have been found satisfactory, including forced warm - air furnaces, both counter-flow and horizontal models, and electric heaters with forced air. A carefully designed system for uniform distribution of the air is necessary with whatever type heating system used. Curing studies are being continued, and engineering assistance is available to growers, Marshall said.

Some southwest Virginia growers have been producing aromatic tobacco for several years. More recently interest is increasing in some southside counties. Growers who follow the best known cultural and curing practices for the crop are grossing $1,000 or more per acre. Recommendations on cultural and curing practices are contained in VPI Extension Bulletin 204, available from county agents and/or the VPI Agricultural Extension Service, Blacksburg, Va .

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh
Curley Tables His Motion
The other night at the Rices', Curley was shaking his head over "young people," his daughter in particular.
"Can't tell her a thing," said Curley. "She wants a dining room set for a wedding present, so I said her mother might let her have ours. Beautiful set, too, only she claims it's 'out of style,' can you beat that!"
"Now, Curley," said Mrs. Rice, "you ought to know better. My mother gave us that set when we got married and I told her the same thing!"
From where I sit, no two people have the same taste in clothes, furniture — or beverages, for that matter. But we should all have respect for each other's preferences. For example, maybe you like tea or milk. Me, I prefer a glass of beer. That shouldn't prevent us from being good neighbors. Let's not be so "set" in our ways that we can't live with our differences.

A Dream Walking!

Los Angeles.- He was walking in his sleep, Clyde said. And was dreaming. Dreaming that the house he was entering was his grandma's, and a meal of fried chicken and cookies awaited him.

It naturally came as a great surprise, Clyde said, when a woman's scream awakened him and a policeman arrested him on suspicion of burglary.

A judge listened kindly and then sentenced Clyde McCall, 21, to 100 days in jail on a charge of trespassing.
